National League Men Have Tampered With battan" Instead of "New York."

Although the National League has finally ratified the peace treaty with the American League, it turns out that the magnates of the older organization have done that which may result in a fresh outbreak of the baseball war all along the line. The question of peace or war, The Sun is in a position to say, de-pends solely on the location of the American League's grounds in this city. When the and the National leagues met in Cincinnati on Jan. 9 they drew up an agreement which contained the clause that the American League should receive formal permission to play ball this year "in New York." According this concession, the American League could locate its new club in Brooklyn, in Queens, on Staten Island, in Manhattan borough or in The Bronx. Having such wide scope, the American League would be able to secure grounds somewhere in the greater city, no matter what might be the obstacles thrown

American League would be able to secure grounds somewhere in the greater city, no matter what might be the obstacles thrown in its way.

Though the New York and Brooklyn clubs were particularly cut up over the loss of Players Delehanty, Davis, Fultz, Elberfeld, Donovan, Kitson and Keeler, they were much more exercised over the invasion of New York by the American League, and went to the recent National League meeting in Cincinnati prepared to fight this latter proposition to the end. Finding, according to positive statements from Brush, that the American League had been shut out of all chance to secure certain grounds on Manhattan Island, the National League magnates schemed in a way that may virtually kill the Mamerican League here and disyupt its circuit. It is stated that they changed the meaning of the clause in the peace agreement relative to the location of the American League club here so that it reads "in the borough of Manhattan" instead of "in New York," and then proceeded to ratify the agreement unanimously.

League men have relused to discuss this point in any way, but the National League men are confident that this was the location to which Precident Johnson referred several weeks ago when he said he had bought one plot outright and had leased another plot adjacent for a term of ten years. Johnson will be here the latter part of the week when more definite details regarding the situation can be obtained.

C. W. Somers, vice-president of the American League, and John F. Kilfoyle, president of the Cieveland club of the American League are both in town. They say the American League will play ball in New York this year, all reports to the contrary notwithstanding, and that the new grounds will be just as conveniently located as the Polo Grounds. Beyond this they will say nothing definite.

LATEST FOOTBALL TIRADE. Boston Professor Cries Bullying, Wanton

Injury, Bull Fight, &c.

BOSTON, Jan. 25 .- Prof. Marshall L. Perrin Boston, Jan. 25.—Prof. Marshall L. Perrin of Boston University attacks football in an article appearing in this month's college publication. He says in part.

"The spirit of bullying is certainly becoming rampant among the boys. It is but carrying the tackling impulse into everyday school intercourse. In the first place the boys are trained to consider as the hero, not a moral champion nor a mental everytic.

school intercourse. In the first place the boys are trained to consider as the hero, not a moral champion nor a mental expert, but the successful tackler or the brawny, irrestible rusher. Not only is he the hero of the game but of the school, of the college, of society, an ideal well enough for sporting newspapers, but far too low to be allowed to take precedence of all others in the minds of the young people.

"Again, to most of the spectators the present game is so ridiculously unintelligible as compared with baseball that it is not well-matched skill, but the general roughness which is exciting, expecting, as one does, that at any moment some player may be injured. Now the sight of blood and a certain amount of experience in accidents may teach one coolness, but here are no accidents, but sheer, wanton injury. Indeed, a bullfight is not to be compared to a football game.

"There is no nation where the evils of bullying and the terrors of fagging are so well developed as in England, and football in its roughest shape has been played with zest by the English from time immemorial."

Wales-Score, 21 to S. The opening match of the international Bugby tourney, in which England, Wales, Ireland and Scotland will participate, took place at Swansea, Wales, on Jan. 10, when England and Wales lined up against each other. Forty thousand persons paid ad-mission to see the game, and on the adjoining housetops and steeples there were at least 100,000 more. Wales inaugurated a splendid three-quarter-back play, and in the first half the "men of Harlech" secured three goals and two tries, 21 points, to nothing for the English-two tries, 21 points, to nothing for the Englishmen.

This took the steam out of the Saxon fifteen, and, as an English critic put it, "they simply laid down at the first breath of the storm and quietly expired." In the second half, aided by the change of sides, England made a chance goal and the final score was: Wales 3 goals, 2 tries, or 21 points; England, 1 goal, or 5 points. After fifteen minutes' play Pearson, the Welsh captain, was injured and had to retire, his team playing the remainder of the match with fourteen men. It was the twentieth match between England and Wales, and England has won 11, to 8 for Wales.

Joe Yeager, the youngster who has been creating a sen sation at Hot Springs because of his successful play on the races, is going to New Orleans this week with a $100.000 hank roll, of which he won $47.000 from Kid Weller in two days. He hails from Cincinnati and is only 20 years old, it is said. Last summer he blew into Chicago with empty pockets and going to Washington Park he met a friend from whom he borrowed $200. His luck changed immediately and, playing from the ground, he soon cleaned up enough money to enable him to make book. When the season closed in Chicago, the youthful plunger was said to have quit a heavier winner than any of the layers there, the amount being generally estimated at $50,000.

AMERICAN SPARS FOR LIPTON. GOLF CHAMPIONSHIP LINKS

The general opinion was, however, that the spars were for the old however, that the spars were for the old boat and that the new challenger would be equipped with out and out British rigging. "Gael" in his "Clyde Breezes" in the Yachting World of Jan. 15, is authority for the statement that the spars are for the new boat. He says:

NATIONAL TOURNEY.

Is Represented or Not—Nassau Course First Choice for the Amateur— Women's Metropolitan Association Most

Although the usual requests were sent out two weeks ago to each of the associate mem-bers of the United States Golf Association asking if either of the three amateur chambionship meetings was desired, Secretary Ballou said last Saturday that so far he had received no replies whatever, and he could cast no light on the championship situation in an official way. Gossip has it that the amateur meeting will be held in the East, the women's in the West, the open on new ground. women's in the West, the open on new ground, East or West, that is at the Huntingdon Valley Country Club, Atlantic City Country Club, or at Cleveland or Detroit. The women's championship never has been played in the West, although it always has had one or more Western entrants, and to misintain its character as a national undertaking it would seem high time that the tournament should go to links in that territory. There are a number of available courses, and the Western delegates may be relied on to pick out the best.

There are more women players of class now There are more women players of class now in the West than there were men players, good, bad and indifferent, when the amateur championship was first held there in 1897, so that a large field of starters is a certainty, whether the East is represented in great force or not.

In the event of a failure to send the meeting to the West this year, it will probably be due to the desire of the delegates to the U.S.G.A. meeting to wait until the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, which will draw thou-sands to the West in 1904 and make it easier to get a thoroughly representative Eastern entry. The probabilities are more in favor of the West this year than for a postpone-ment of the long-deferred right; for it is not a concession that is seked, but merely an enforcement of a primal duty of the organiation, the encouragement and recognition of golf in a broad and national spirit.

As to the amateur championship, the Nassau Country Club, which, after twice being outvoted for the tournament, has jumped in and done all in its power to make the meeting a success for the winning club, seems to be the success for the winning club, seems to be the first choice this time. The links possess every quality of a championship course—length, mature turf, well-placed hazards, a commodious clubhouse, and it is very accessible by train from the city for those who would not prefer to put up near the grounds. President Murdock has not been empowered as yet to make an application for the amateur championship, but should the delegates vote to go to Nassau, there is no doubt that the tournament would be the best-attended and hest-managed meeting ever held in the East. The popularity of the links was demonstrated at the open tournament last September, which had 144 entries, and, in spite of a terrible rainstorm, seventy-one started in the qualifying round and sixty-nine returned cards.

On next Friday the annual meeting of the Women's Metropolitan Golf Assocation will be held in this city, the first of the round of important golf meetings to be held here, Virtually, the officers will be reelected, and the most important business to be transacted will be the arrangements for the championship tournament and the season's team matches.

Answer to Football Query. Columbia.—A is right. He owes B pothise. Such bets are draws, stakeholder or no stakeholder. The betting rules of the turf do not apply. 2. It was a safety. The ball was not on, over or behind the goal line when Daly caught it, and clause 3 of a ction D of Rule 4 will tell you why it was a safety. The impetus, according to this clause, was given by the side defending the goal:
